THE DOCTORS' TEST.

An Experiment Showing the Power of Imagination.

Although I had known George Martin a long time, he had only lately initiated me into the mysteries of his life. I knew well that he had been guilty of many kinds of excesses and indiscretions in his youth, nevertheless I was not a little astonished to hear that he had once sunk so low as burglary. Without further remark I here relate the chief episode out of the remarkable career of this strange man:

"Yes," said he, "I had a hard time of it in those days, and finally I became a -burglar. When Robert Schmiedlein proposed to me that we should break into the somewhat retired house of two doctors, Dr. Engler and Dr. Langner, I thoughtlessly agreed. Both doctors were well known on account of their scientific researches, and one of them especially for his eccentric manner.

"Well, the night fixed for the carrying out of our design arrived, and we went to work with the greatest confidence, for all the circumstances were favorable for a burglary. It was pitch dark, neither moon nor stars visible, and in addition a strong west wind was blowing, which was very welcome to us, as it promised to drown every sound, however slight.

"It was toward two in the morning as we, assuming all was safe, began by filing through a chain which fastened a ladder to the wall. The ladder we placed under a window in the first story on the left side of the house. In less than five minutes we had opened window, and, hearing Schmiedlein climbed through it and I followed him. After carefully reclosing the venetians we ventured to light a lantern, and then discovered that we were in a kind of lumber room, the door of which was locked

"After picking the lock, we determined first to explore the rooms on the ground floor, thinking we should thus run less risk of waking the inhabitants of the house.

"To our no little astonishment we perceived, as we crept downstairs, a light shining under the door of one of the rooms at the back of the building.

"At first we were both for beating a hasty retreat. Schmiedlein soon recovered himself, and proposed that we should force our way into the room. bind and gag every occupant, and then obtain by threats all desirable information. "I agreeing, we approached the door, While carefully throwing the light round, I noticed, about seven feet from the floor, a wire which appeared to pass through the door we were approaching, and, on pointing it out to my companion, he thought it would be connected with some bell. "I replied in a whisper that we should try and avoid an alarm by cutting the wire, and as I could just reach it with my hands I would hold it firm while Schmiedlein cut it between my hands and thus prevent it jerking back and ringing the bell.

"Setting the lantern on the floor, I seized the wire, while Schmiedlein drew a pair of pincers out of his pocket. But the moment I touched it I felt a frightful shock, which quivered through and through me, so that I fell all of a heap, tearing the wire down with me. I remember hearing the loud ringing of a bell, while Schmiedlein-whom, moreover, I have never seen since-disappeared like lightning into the darkness and escaped, very likely by the way we had come.

"On falling down I struck my head violently against the opposite wall and became unconscious, while the electric bell-at that time a novelty-rang unceasingly.

"Regaining my senses I found myself bound and helpless, which, after all, did not surprise me, as I had concluded I had been caught where I had fell. It soon struck me, however, that there was some peculiar circumstance connected with my captivity. "I was nearly undressed and lay on a cold slab of slate which was about the height of a table from the ground, and only a piece of linen protected my body from immediate contact with the stone. Straight over me hung a large lamp, whose polished reflector spread a light far around, and when I, as far as possible, looked round I perceived several shelves with bottles, flasks and chemical preparations of all kinds upon them. In one corner of the room stood a complete human skeleton, and various odds and ends of human bodies hung here and there upon the walls. I then knew I was lying on the operation-or dissecting-table of a doctor, a discovery which naturally troubled me greatly; at the same time I perceived that my mouth also was firmly gagged.

"What did it all mean? Had some accident befallen me, so that a surgical operation was necessary for my recovkind, and also felt no pain; nevertheless here I lay stripped and helpless, on this terrible table, gagged and bound, which indicated something extraordi-

"It astonished me not a little that there should be such an operation room in such a house, until I remembered that Dr. Languer, as the district physician, had to carry out the post-mortem examinations for the circuit, and that in the small provincial town no other room was available for such a purpose. I felt too miserable, however, to think anything more about it. But I soon noticed, after another vain effort to free myself, that I was not alone in the room, for I heard the rustling of paper, and then some one said, in quiet measured tones:

Yes, Languer, I am quite convinced that this man is particularly suited for the carrying out of my highly important experiment. How long have I last, to-night, I shall be able to produce the proof of my theory.'

'That would indeed be a high triumph of human skill,' I heard a second voice reply; 'but consider, dear doctor, if that man there were to expire under our hands-what then?

"'Impossible!' was the quick reply. 'It is bound to succeed, and even if it did not, he will die a glorious death in the interests of science: whilst, if we were to let him go, he would sooner or later fall into the hands of the hangman.'

"I could not even see the two men, yet their conversation was doubtless about me; and, hearing it, I shuddered from head to foot. They were proposing some dangerous operation on me, not for my benefit, but in the interests of medical science!

"At any rate, I thought, they wen't undertake such a thing without my sanction; and what, after all, was their intention? It must be something terrible, for they had already mentioned the possibility of my succumbing. I should soon know the fearful truth, for, after a short pause, they continued:

"'It has long been acknowledged that the true source of life lies in the blood. What I wish to prove, dear Languer, is this. Nobody need die from pure loss of blood, and yet such cases occur only too often, whilst we must all the time be in possession of means to renew this highly important sap of life, and thus avoid a fatal result. We read of a few, but only a few, cases of a man who for some reason or other has lost so much blood that his death appeared inevitable, if some other noblehearted man had not offered his own blood, in order to let it flow from his veins into the veins of the dying man. As you are aware, this proceeding has always had the desired effect. I consider it, however, a great mistake to deprive a fellow-being of necessary blood, for the one thereby only gains life and strength at the cost of another, who offers himself for an always dangerous sacrifice.' "Yes, I do not think that right either,' replied Dr Languer. 'And, moreover, how seldom is a man found at the critical moment ready to submit himself at once to such a dangerous loss of blood."

" 'That is very natural; no one lightly undertakes such a thing,' continued the other 'So much greater will be our triumph if the operation succeeds. I hope to show you, dear colleague, that although we are thinking of taking that man's blood, even to the last drop, in a few hours we shall set him on his feet again.'

"Just so! I do not see why we should not succeed. At any rate, in the interests of science we should prove in a practical manner the correctness of our theory.' "'And this proof, dear friend, we will undertake without delay. Let me just repeat my instructions, for we cannot go to work too carefully to preserve the life of this man. I will open a vein in his thigh and measure exactly the quantity of blood which flows out, at the same time watching the beating of the heart. Under ordinary circumstances nothing could possibly save him; but just before the extinction of the last spark of life we will insert the warm blood of a living rabbit into his veins, as we have already arranged. If my theory is right the pulsation of the heart will then gradually increase in strength and rapidity. At the same time it is important to protect his limbs from cold and stiff ness, which will naturally take place with the loss of all arterial blood.'

"The conversation of the two doctors overwhelmed me with deadly terror. I could scarcely believe I was really awake, and not the victim of some cruel nightmare.

"The fact remained, however, that I lay helpless on the dissecting table, that a threatening skeleton stood in the cor ner of the room, and, above all, that listen to in silence filled me with a fear such as I had never before experienced. Involuntarily the thought forced itself They made me a very handsome presupon me that I was at the mercy of two infatuated doctors, to whose mad theory I should here fall the victim.

"I said to myself that no doctor with a sound mind would propose such a forgotten the hour when I lay on the herself most horribly. The king had frightful and murderous experiment dissecting table-the unexpected victim not been apprised of the hopelessness of upon a living man.

"The two doctors now approached the dissecting table and looked calmly into my face; then, smiling, took off their coats and tucked up their sleeves. I struggled to get free, as only a descircumstances could have struggled. In vain. Their long-acquired experience knew how to render me completely helpless, and, to their satisfaction, 1 could not even make a sound.

"Dr. Engler now turned to a sidetable, and I saw him open a chest of surgical instruments and take out a lancet, with which he returned to me. He at once removed the covering from my right thigh, and although I lay bound to the table in such a way that I could not see my limbs, I was able to watch the doctor busied with his prep-ery? But I remembered nothing of the tion that he had opened the principal vein of the thigh would have sufficed to shake the strongest nerves.

"There is no danger,' said Dr. Engler, looking into my staring, protruding eyes with terrible calmness. 'You will not die, my good man. I have only opened an artery in your thigh, and you will experience all the sensations of bleeding to death. You will get weaker and weaker, and finally, perhaps, lose all consciousness, but we shall not let you die. No. no! You must live and astonish the scientific world through my great discovery!"

"I naturally could say nothing in reply, and no words can adequately express what I felt at that moment. I could, in one breath, have wept, implored, cursed and raved.

"Meanwhile I feit my life's blood flowing, and could hear it drop into a vessel standing under the end of the table. Every moment the doctor laid his hand on my heart, at the same time been wishing to make the attempt-at making remarks which only increased my horror. "After he had put his hand on me for at least the twentieth time, and felt the beating of the heart, he said to his assistant: " 'Are you ready with your preparations, Languer? He has now lost an enormous quantity of blood, and the pulsation is getting weaker and weak-See, he is already losing consciousness,' and with these words he took the gag out of my mouth.

"A feeling of deadly weakness, as well as of infinite misery, laid hold of me when the physician uttered these words, and on my attempting to speak, I found that scarcely a whispering murmur passed my lips Shadowy phantoms and strange colors flitted before my eyes, and I believed myself to be already in a state past all human

"What happened the next few minutes I do not know, for I had fainted. When I reopened my eyes, I noticed I no longer lay on the dissecting table, but was sitting in an arm-chair in a comfortable room, near which stood the two doctors looking at me.

"Near me was a flask of wine, several smelling salts, a few basins of cold water, some sponges and a galvanic battery. It was now bright daylight, and the two doctors smiled as they looked at me.

"When I remembered the terrible experiment I shuddered with horror, and tried to rise. I felt too weak, however, and sank back helpless into the chair. Then the circuit physician, in a friendly but firm voice, addressed me:

"Compose yourself, young man. You imagined you were slowly bleeding to death; nevertheless, be assured that you have not lost a single drop of blood. You have undergone no operation whatever, but have simply been the victim of your own imagination. We knew very well you heard every word of our conversation, a conversation which was only intended to deceive you as much as possible. What I maintained was that a man's body will always completely lie under the influence of what he himself firmly believes, while my colleague, on the other hand, held the opinion that the body can never be hurt by anything which only exists in the imagination. This has long been an open question between us, which, after your capture, we at once determined to decide. So we surrounded you with objects of a nature to influence your imagination, aided further by our conversation; and, finally, your conviction that we would really carry out the operation of which you heard us speak completed the deception. "You have now the satisfaction of knowing that you are as safe and as the greater part of his time to the persound as ever you were. At the same time we assure you that you really showed all the symptoms of a man bleeding to death, a proof that the body can sometimes suffer from the most absurd un-reality that the mind can imagine.' 'Astonishment, joy and doubt at finding myself neither dead nor dying struggled within me, and then the rage of having been subjected to such an awful and heartless experiment by the | ly elected the executive chief of the two doctors overcame me. SIDNEY DILLON'S LIFE.

Incidents in the Career of the Noted Financier.

Starting in Life as a Poor and Priendless Boy, He Became One of the Richest and Most Powerful Men in the Country.

The career of Sidney Dillon, of New York, who died a short time ago, affords one of the most notable examples least fair length of body, with fine spring in American history of the possibilities of ribs, and the absence of those promiwhich await men of talent, industry and ambition. Mr. Dillon went into business for himself at the age of seven road at the not exorbitant salary of one dollar per week. He came of a family of dehorning. whose circumstances necessitated the practice of thrift and economy, and as his board and lodging were in addition to his salary he managed to save the greater portion of his income, and in a short time he had enough to purchase a horse and cart, with which he went into the carrying business on a much larger scale. Then he bethought himself of taking contracts to carry sand and water on a larger scale for the corporation which he had previously served as a day laborer.

Having successfully carried out his contracts and finding himself the possessor of a few hundred dollars, he hired a number of horses and carts and undertook heavier tasks, all of which by indomitable energy, he completed to the satisfaction of his employers and to his own pecuniary benefit.

Forty-eight years ago he determined to marry, and on a visit to Amherst, Mass., he met a young and brilliant woman, a member of one of the village's most respected families. To his wife Mr. Dillon owed a great part of his success. She did not come to him with any large dowry, but brought him a wife's love and encouragement.

Their relations throughout their wedded life were of the most beautiful character, and the heaviest loss which | their ability to blend so admirably with ber, 1883, when he buried her who had sto a of this country have been much been his life's best companion and improved by Shorthorn blood. When quite a young man Mr. Dillon came to New York city. He still devoted his attention to carrying out railroad contracts. It can safely be said that few men in the country have undertaken larger contracts. It was he who built the Fourth avenue improvement tunnel from the Grand Central depot to Harlem, New York city. This enterprise was completed at a cost of $7,000,000.

When the Union Pacific railroad was contemplated, thirty years ago, he gave sonal superintendence of the work. He went on to Omaha and was continually traveling between that city and Ogden. At the small village of Promontory, seventy-five miles west of Ogden, Mr. Dillon in 1839 assisted in laying the last rail of the road. From its incipiency he has been permanently connected with the road. When Horace F. Clark died in 1874 Mr. Dillon was unanimousgreater portion of his career, closely identified with Jay Gould, and when years ago, he at once made Mr. Dillon

A King Killed by Fright.

One of the most remarkable instances in history of death by fright is that of King Frederick I., of Prussia. He was actually scared to death by his wife. He was one day sleeping in an armchair berg, who had been hopelessly insane and made her way to his private apartments. As mentioned above, Frederick was dozing when his wife, dressed in a ent, and troubled themselves about me pure white gown, dashed through the plate glass in the door and threw herself in a raging delirium upon him. In hope, a better man. Still, I have never breaking the glass she of course cut her case, and was astonished beyond ests of science, as Dr Engler ex- measure at the appearance of the woman, clad only in linen and covered with blood. His shrieks aroused the whole friend. His death, which recently took palace, but when she had been secured the king himself was found to be in a raging delirium. ABERDEEN POLLED CATTLE.

Careful Summing Up of the Aberdeen-Angus Good Qualities.

The Aberdeen Polls possess characteristic shapes. The Shorthorn and Hereford are both good types of what may be regarded as the parallelogramic form. while the Aberdeen Poll is probably the mest perfect type of the cylindrical form that is in existence. This means a great deal. It implies that there shall be at nences and abrupt angles which mar the utility of some otherwise good specimens of the other breeds. Compared with the Shortherus they are scarcely so large, are lower set, somewhat thicker. less pointy and more smooth, although of course there are individual exceptions.

The average specimens of this breed are remarkable for their retention of symmetry of form, even when they are being loaded with fat. They seldom evince that disposition to patchiness which mars the appearance of individuals of some of the other breeds and renders the carcass much less valuable. The possession of this useful property would go far of itself to establish the fact that the Aberdeen Polls are good stall feeders. Of this we have confirmatory evidence in the prizes they have won on both sides of the Atlantic at the leading fat stock shows. Their excellent stall feeding qualities, linked with the fact that they are hornless. should be well weighed by the farmers as water carrier for the laborers on an of this province in those days when the extension of the Mohawk & Hudson legislature finds it necessary to appoint a commission to investigate the question

This breed is distinguished for the production of a good carcass of beef. It is good because generally speaking the dead weight of dressed meat is large in proportion to the live weight; the meat itself is of an excellent quality, evidenced by its ready sale in the leading British markets. It is said to be marbled or fleeked in a greater degree than that of some breeds. But this is a matter which is to some extent controlled by the feeding, although heredity does influence the character of meat in this respect as well as in regard to quantity.

The prepotency of the Aberdeen Poll is well established, although its claims in this respect stand no higher those of the Shorthorn, the Hereford and the Galloway. But this strong power of transmission renders it a potent factor in effecting improvement in common stocks, since the qualities that are thus imparted with much uniformity are those of a high order. It has repeatedly been demonstrated that the Aberdeen Poll crosses admirably with the Shorthorn and the Shorthorn grade, and that the converse of this is true, viz., that the Shorthorn blends admirably with the Aberdeen Poll and the Aberdeen Poll grade. The important feature here is the Shorthorn grade, for the common Aberdeen-Angus bulls our farmers can carcass and without horns. In regard to robustness of constitution, to longevity and to ability to adapt themselves to change of climate, they stand well, quite as well as the Shorthorns and Herefords, but do not decidedly excel them in these respects, unless when the latter have been impaired in constitution by long continued in-andin breeding. This sin is perhaps not chargeable to the same extent upon the breeders of Aberdeen Polls as upon the breeders of Shorthorns. The grazing qualities of the Aberdeen Polls are quite equal to those of the Shorthorns, but not superior, while they are inferior in some degree to those of the Herefords. On the other hand, they are probably superior to the Herefords as stall feeders and quite equal to the Shorthorns. The possession of this property implies that they are distinguished by docility of disposition. Their milking qualities are not of a high order, although the quality of the milk is excellent. They have been reared as beef producers, the calves sucking their own dams, which is always in time fatal to the retention of superior milking qualities.

To recapitulate, the qualities which specially distinguish this beefing breed are rotundity, density and smoothness of carcass, the ability to behave well in the stall when alive and to give a large percentage of excellent meat when dead. -Professor Thomas Shaw, of Ontario Agricultural Experiment Station.

Live Stock Points.

To detect for a certainty sheep scab a magnifying glass is necessary. It is known to the trade as a "scab glass." and is not expensive.

In live stock raising one great lack has been that of attention to small details of cost. The old time farmer, with plenty of land and plenty of feed, seldom troubled himself to keep account of the cost of anything in the rearing of animals or the production of crops. Nine out of every ten merchants in business would be bankrupted in a few years' time if they took no more account of profit and loss than the average farmer and stock raiser does even now. The conditions of living have become so much harder everywhere that the farmer must inaugurate the strictest business methods in his operations or get left. He should count the cost, taking in every item, of raising every animal that he sells, every acre of crop that he produces-yes, every pound of butter and cheese that is made on his farm. Only thus can he tell what is and what is not profitable to produce. He must consider his nearness to market and what kind of stock is at once best adapted to his land and his market. Sometimes he can make a lucky strike and create a market for some new product. Then his fortune is made.

Chauncey Depew, a bright and shining light in the republic n party, and the man who put Harrison in nomination at Minneapolis, spoke as follows of Grover Cleveland at a banquet given in honor of Judge Pryor, at New York, Oct. 7, 1990:

"If I were to name the typical American, the man who loves and believes in his country beyond everything else-the man who, determined once in what direction his duty leads, cannot be swerved from the path-the man who is doggedly persistent in what he believes to be right-the man who thinks not of self, but of his country and its needs, I would name Grover Cleveland. What he has accomplished is the very highest tribut e to the possibilities of American citizenship. cars across Lake Michigan is soon to be put into practice. A large propeller is under construction at Toledo which will have a capacity of 21 cars and it is expected to tow a barge of 15 cars, making 36 cars, or more than an average freight train. The cost of transferring grain and other freight from cars to steamer and from steamer to cars forms a very heavy item of cost, which the proposed plan, if successful, will save. BEEF BREEDS.

Meat Making Qualities of Different Breeds of Cattle.

We present this week to our readers who are interested in cattle breeding an assortment of the various types of beef steers. Some of them are portraits of steers that took prizes at fat cattle shows.

FIG. II-PRIZE SHORTHORN STEER. No. 2 is a splendid Shorthorn that took the sweepstakes prize for the model beef

FIG. III-PRIZE HOLSTEIN-FRIESIAN STEER. No. 3 also took a prize as a beef steer of the Holstein-Friesian breed at the Chicago Fat Stock show. The Holsteins are of two strains, beef and dairy, the difference being distinctly marked to connoisseurs. The animal in the picture represents the beef breed.

FIG. IV-HEREFORD STEER.

FIG. V-GALLOWAY STEER.

No. 5 is not a prize winner either, but like the Hereford a plain, honest beef in private life, by breed a Galloway. In the northwest the Galloways and that other hornless breed, the Aberdeen Jury Angus, are growing more popular among the beef raisers. The Galloways stand a severe climate especially well.

Now look at these fine beeves, examine their points, and decide for yourself which breed will bring you in the most money for the expense and trouble of raising it.

Wool for the World's Fair. The following circular has been sent out from Washington as supplemental to the agricultural department's earlier request for wool samples: The agricultural department will exhibit at the Columbian exposition between 3,000 and 4,000 wool samples from all parts of the world. They will cover all classes of wool, from the highest to the lowest. Especial attention has been given to the selection of samples of wools that compete with our home grown wools. These were procured through a special agent of the treasury department sent abroad for the purpose of procuring samples for custom house standards. The department is desirous of obtaining the American samples direct from the growers, so that comparison can be made with wools of the same character grown in different parts of the country. The samples will be placed in glass jars labeled with the grower's name and address, also with description of the sheep and wool. Assistant Secretary Willits is giving wool and sheep especial attention, as he is desirous of furthering the interests of this great industry. With this view he has requested Hon. John T. Rich to make a report to accompany this exhibition. Mr. Rich will, when the collection is completed, examine the ples comparatively, and being a practi-cal sheep breeder of long experience his report will be of great value. Each sample should be about one pound in weight and taken from the body of the fleece. Bags for the same and blank invoices are furnished by the department. Samples can be mailed without the payment of postage. Should you desire to have your clip represented please address for particulars, Edward A. Greene, Philadelphia, or John T. Rich, Elbs, Leventer of the same and the same an peer county, Mich.

Beeves intended to be shipped abs should weigh before the fattening of mences from 800 to 900 pounds.

AUTUMN-DAYS.

From Dear Kate's Scrap-Book, and Pub lished in Affectionate Remembrance of Her.

To-day across her pensive face, Sad nature draws a veil of mist, As if to hide the pallid cheeks

And whitened lips that Death had kissed. And Summer lies with folded hands:

Her happy, sunny tasks are done; The paths she trod are sere and brown; The leaves are dead, her fair hands hung.

The sun looks liks a golden moon, His strength wanes with the waning year, A mournful whisper in the air Doth tell us of the dark days near.

O, saddest days of all the days, You do beget a thoughtful mood: The leafiless trees, the barren fields, Teach lessons easily understood.

But, as I gaze upon the scene, Behold! the golden butterflies Rise from the stubble bare and brown, And seem to pierce the misty skies.

And so I hope, when comes to us The dreary Autumn-time of life, When from our souls the chains are loosed, So may we soar from toil and strife.

When Death doth kiss our pallid lips, May we, e'en like the butterflies. Find wings on which to soar from earth, Until like them, we reach the skies. -Faith Walton

One woman, sound and fat, had two large cancers taken from her breast and three more were forming, one an internal one, when God healed her. Many had instantly laid aside glasses with restored vision. One of Dr. Simpson's leading members had a bone knit in answer to prayer. But wonderful as these multitudinous cases are, why would God redeem us from sin and yet leave its curse on His children's bodies? Why a husband keep a bride an invalid? Why keep the temple of A Cure for Paralysis.

> Frank Cornelius, of Purcell, Ind. Ter., says: "I induced Mr. Pinson, whose wife had paralysis in the face, to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. To their great surprise before the bottle had all been used she was a great deal better. Her face had been drawn to one side; but the Pain Balm relieved all pain and soreness and the mouth assumed its natural shape." Bourne, Druggist and Optician, Stanford, Ky. aside glasses with restored vision. One the Holy Ghost all broken down by sin's inroads of disease? God can do these things. He used to do them; because He came to save men from sin and its curse. He does do it just the same now, where it is sought by faith, His appointed way. Yet even these wonderful spiritual benefits, though they have restored some broken down ministers in a brief time to such activity that they need no "summer vacation," are but secondary to the great work of missions. This is the work of the Allsance. Sanctified, censecrated lives, healed bodies, all are held as means to an end, to prepare for the coming of the Lord of Glory, Who ine? Judge it by the test. What sacrifice will its professors make for God and man? Sabbath found us expecting and praising God for the great things He was to do that day. Lo, in 5,000 of people, scarcely an average congregation in financial ability, nearly $60,000 raised in one day! Many were the tears of joy as self-denying ones assumed the support of one or two missionaries. One man it had been my privilege to anoint and pray for, and whom I knew the Holy Ghost fell on, a reformed drunkard, that day said, with deep emotion, "What I have I give-I give myself for India." Many more offered as missionaries to Africa, India and other fields. Time fails me to tell of individual cases. It would require a book. As an example, one level-headed missionary from covery. the Yoruba, Africa, told us at Beulah Park, Ohio, of a girl in their school who in deep anguish sought all over the town for an interpreter to tell some savages from the interior of Jesus. Failing to find one, knowing it was the only opportunity for these poor people to hear of Him Who died for them, she said to the missionary, "You speak and I will try and tell them." And she did interpret the entire discourse into a tongue she never heard before, and continues yet to speak the language. I am not crazy. These are as creditable witnesses as any one in Lincoln county, Ky. God promised it and the simple faith of those Africans just takes God's word at what it is, believes and receives. Mrs. George Fitch, whom I know well

These Farms are all well improved and good rich lands, running in size from 50 to 500 Acres.
Considering theis locality, their richness and fertility of soil, the convenience of turnpikes and railroads that bring markets right to qur door, they are cheaper than the Lands of any other county in the State. There is scarcely a Farm in the county over 5 miles from a depot.

The county is checked with turnpikes running inevery direction. There is not a public road entering the county seat that is not Macadamized. We have the Knoxville Branch of the L. & N. R. R. dividing the county from East to West and the I have quite a number of FARMS for sale of the

R. from this place to Cincinnati, crossing the C. & O. at Winchester, giving full access to the markets of the whole world. Besides, we have three large Frour Mills in the county that give us a market for all our grain right at home; and the development of the mountain regions of Eastern and South-eastern Kentucky by sailroads and the outlet South by railroads has created such a demand for all kinds of cereals and provender that we can scarcely retain enough for home consumption.

for all kinds of cereals and provender that wecan scarcely retain enough for home consumption.

The people are prosperous, generous and kind, believing in Christianity and education. There is not a neighborhood in the county but has a good church and school-house.

Stanford, the county seat of Lincoln, is a prosperous little city of about 2,500 inhabitants and is the great doorway from the North and Northeast South and from the Northwest to Southeast, and standing as it does gazing right into the bosom of the undeveloped mountains of Southeaster Kentucky backed up by the whole Blue-Grass region of the State with railroads running through it to all points of the compass, makes it naturally it to all points of the compass, makes it naturally one of the best located towns in the South for manufactures and other enterprises of magnitude. one of the best located towns in the South for mannfactures and other enterprises of magnitude. Water Works are now being agitated and right above the town about three-fourths of a mile there could be erected Water Works with very little cost that would supply a city of 150,000 in habitants with the purest and best water in the world. Our little city has been newly rebuilt in the last few years and its business houses ard residences will compare with larger cities of greater pretensions. Our merchants and tradesmen are all prosperous and doing well. We have two banks with a capital stock of $400,000 that are prosperous and in a good condition.

We have spleadid schools. We have a Female College, a large brick building, with ever 100 pupils in attendance and under the principalship of Prof. J. M. Hubbard, is in a flourishing condition. We also have a Seminary that is a good school, with Prof. B. F. Johnson, at its head. We have one of the best Public School buildings in attendance, and with other good private schools, you see our school facilities are excellent.

We have elegant church buildings, representing every denomination, with a full corps or ministers of fias class talent and are doing a better business than any class of men in the city.
